frequently asked questions

How much water should I use with Oil to Foam Total Cleanser?

To begin, slightly dampen face – just a few drops of water should work. Massage gel-oil over face and eyes to dissolve surface oil and dirt. Then wet hands and continue massaging to create a foam to wash away make-up, sebum, and sunscreen. Rinse with warm water.

How does Oil to Foam Total Cleanser actually work?

Oil-based cleansers are effective when it comes to removing make-up, excess oil, and debris from the skin without stripping or weighing down the skin. Our oil to foam formula begins as a gel-oil, which breaks up make-up, sunscreen, debris, and excess sebum. Then, add a splash of water and massage to create a rich foam that washes away any remaining impurities.

Why would I use Oil to Foam Total Cleanser over the Dermalogica Double Cleanse?

We believe Double Cleansing is the secret to ultra-clean, healthy-looking skin. So whether you're Double Cleansing with an oil-based cleanser and then with a traditional cleanser or with an all-in-one product like Oil to Foam Total Cleanser really depends on time and personal preference.

Can I Double Cleanse with Oil to Foam Total Cleanser?

There is no need to Double Cleanse with Oil to Foam Total Cleanser as one wash removes layers of daily buildup. It is a multi-functional product that works twice as hard, twice as fast. However, if you prefer a traditional Double Cleanse, use PreCleanse or Micellar Prebiotic Cleanser prior to using a skin-specific cleanser.
